“This is not just for pastors,” Lum emphasized. “We want everyone to come. We’d love for pastors to bring people with them from their churches. What a phenomenal thing for a pastor to bring folks with him and for his church members to go back home energized, encouraged, and passionate about sharing Jesus. It would be a great thing for Mississippi.”

Along with Spirit-driven exhortation from experienced evangelists, the conference will hold a time of worship led by Paul Davis, Worship Pastor of Northcrest Church, and a session at noon on Monday led by Shane Pruitt that is specifically geared toward encouraging student ministers to reach Mississippi students with the Gospel.

Set aside time to come. Maybe there is a person God has placed in your path who needs to hear the Gospel and you do not feel equipped to share it. Come and learn how God equips us for that calling. Maybe you have planted seeds in someone’s life for many years but have yet to see a harvest. Come and see how God is not slow in keeping His promise and that He does not want anyone to perish, but everyone to repent (2 Peter 3:9). Set aside time to come so that the Spirit may encourage you in obeying the command to make disciples of all nations (Matthew 28:19).

Evangelism is not a responsibility held only by pastors, but by every disciple of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.
